

WOOD RIVER TIMES

HAILEY, IDAHO.

Entered at the Postoffice at Hailey as Second Class Matter.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1882.

A dwarf 17 years old and hardly twenty-five inches in height was sold in France to Jean Lumeau by his father, to be exhibited in a booth. His purchasers conceived the idea of establishing a miniature menagerie, with the dwarf as a tamer. He caused a number of cats to be painted so as to look like tigers, and giving the dwarf a whip, compelled him by kicks and threats to goad the cats into a furious attack. The poor little fellow was literally torn to pieces by the infuriated brutes.

Judge Edward A. Thomas discusses, in the North American Review, the value of oaths in courts. In his judgment the oath should be entirely dispensed with, as doing more harm than good. He declares that the conscientious man will tell the truth, when legally called upon to do so, as thoroughly without the oath as with it, and that dishonest persons are seldom restrained by the utmost solemnity of form. In short, he believes that the oath has lost its force as a restraint, and is merely the formula of an exploded superstition.

Nellie Pickett has seen a great deal of wild life for a girl of 20. She married Tom Pickett and went with him to New Mexico, where they joined the band of Billy the Kid, and she being a fine horsewoman, a crack shot, and both vicious and pretty, is said to have ruled the gang. After Pickett was killed she became the wife of Bawdry, the second in command, and when he was killed she found a third husband in Billy the Kid. Many stories are told of her exploits, whether acting as a spy in female attire or riding at the head of the band dressed in the buckskin male attire of the Plains. She died a few days ago.

The father of a thousand children has just died in Vienna. Ferdinand Reid was a man of considerable wealth, and was happily married, but the great regret of himself and wife was that they had no children, and they concluded to act as parents for the fatherless and the motherless. For nearly a quarter of a century he was known as the father of the orphans, but his zeal and repute increased to such an extent that at the time of his death he was the legal guardian of more than a thousand fatherless children. Those whom he adopted in this manner were not fitfully taken up and then let drop, but he kept conscientious watch and ward over them, from their early education until their marriage, or their start in adult life at the close of their apprenticeship. He never sought fame or publicity, and took no credit to himself for his devotion to those who had no natural claim upon him.

The Positives have been quarreling a little among themselves in Paris. When Auguste Comte died he bequeathed all his works, manuscripts, and the objects which had been his special personal property to his little band of disciples. This disposition in his will did not please his widow, who disputed it in 1870 and lost her suit. But Pierre Lafitte, the chief of the Positive school, was gallant enough to give up to Mme. Comte a portrait of her husband, which was the only one in existence, on the understanding that it should come back to the Positive Society on her death. The lady forgot this agreement, for before her death in 1877 she gave the portrait to Wyrnonhoff. Then Lafitte forbade the administrator of Mme. Comte's estate to give up the portrait. The picture remained in the administrator's hands until the death of that person, and a few days ago the two Positives, Lafayette and Wyrnonhoff, had a legal wrangle for the possession of the coveted object. The court sustained the judgment of 1870, and the Positive Society is authorized to receive and keep the portrait of the founder of its school of thought. During the trial a constantly growing adherence to his principles in France was clearly shown.
